1. Introduction

The first Hungarian Minister of Defense after the war was Gen. Janos VOROS. A democrat in the western sense as well as a good organizer and strategist, his intention was to organize a non-partisan, well-trained army. Intrigues were organized against him, particularly by Janos TOROK, Quartermaster General, and a member of the left wing of the Socialist Party, who had been guilty of financial irregularities. VOROS was succeeded by TOMBOR, who was followed in turn by BARTHA, a member of the Smallholders Party. Under his regime, PALFFY-OESTERREICHER established himself in the Ministry. The next minister was DINNYES, and when DINNYES became Minister President, Peter VERES, President of the Hungarian National Peasant Party, became DINNYES' successor. He is supposed to possess nationalist feeling in a marked degree and is said to have often expressed anti-Communist sentiments. He is devoted to the Hungarian peasantry, and willing to expose himself in defending members of his party. In general, it is thought that his conduct is based solely on the consideration that Hungary is at the mercy of the Russians. He has come to terms with the situation and attempts to advance himself by any means. A born diplomat, he is not entirely in CP good graces. The General Secretary of the National Peasant Party, Ferenc ERDEI, sees to it that good relations are maintained with the CP and thereby takes a burden off VERES.

Up to the present, there has been no mobilization plan worked out. One will soon be elaborated by the circle of PALFFY-OESTERREICHER. PALFFY firmly intends to build a small but well-organized, fanatical, well-trained army; he will supply everything for this army, money, equipment, etc. He wants to reinstate old, well-trained officers. At the Moscow negotiations, in which he and VERES took part, they proposed to the Soviets an army of 120,000 men. The Soviets cancelled a certain percentage of reparations, from which sum the army is to be equipped under Soviet control.

At the request of the KPCs (~~secret political~~), in December 1947 the Personnel Chief, ILLY, issued an order that every member of the Ministry must belong to a political party. This was carried out rigorously, and all persons without party affiliations were compelled to join. Officially, starting from 1 March 1948, political parties were banned within the Hungarian Army. There is now a KPCs representative in every section of the Ministry, which has created an atmosphere of mutual distrust.

The directing figures within the Ministry are PALFFY-OESTERREICHER, SOLYOM, ILLY, and RADVANYI, all former General Staff members with excellent technical qualifications. SOLYOM alone has not joined the CP, but he is completely in sympathy with its aims.

2. Commission for the "B" List (B lista ugyek miniszteri biztosa)

This office determines which officers now on active service should be placed on the inactive ("B") list. In practice, it determines which officers should be gotten rid of for reasons of political unreliability, technical incompetence, or non-essential services. The commission consists of three members, one from the office of the Minister President (DINNYES), one from the Ministry of Defense, and one from the Trade-Union. The chief of section, Brig. Gen. Miklos BARTOFFY, passes on and directs the commission, and makes decisions in doubtful cases. Technically, this section is coordinated with the Ministry of Defense, but it is in fact subordinate to both the Office of the Ministry of Defense (Miniszteri Iroda) and the Office of the Minister President (in this case, State Secretary Bela BOJTA). Close contact is also maintained with the KPCs, for necessary investigations. Deputy chief is Cpt. Dr. Janos ILLES.

3. Budapest City Command (Budapesti Varosparancsnoksag)

Address: St. Baszo Barracks, Budapest VIII, Ulloi u. Commandant: Col. Gyorgy PORFFY. This unit maintains military order in Budapest in case of alarm or other emergency. It is normally subordinate to the First Military District Command, but in important matters can be directly subordinated to the Ministry of Defense. The City Command guards military installations and persons and performs routine garrison duties in Budapest.

25X1 4. KPCs Comment: organization of the Katona Politikai Csoportfonokseg, a secret organization for the political supervision, indoctrination, and control of the Hungarian Army, founded by PALFFY-OESTERREICHER in 1945, has been discussed in greater detail in .

5. Inspectorate of Defense (Honvedseg Felugyeloje)

25X1 This office, headed by Maj. Gen. Gyorgy PALFFY-OESTERREICHER, is the highest authority of the Hungarian Army in military matters, corresponding to the former office of Chief of the General Staff, and entirely independent, within this field, of the Minister President. More and more control has been centered in this office, so that at present its head is more important than the Minister of Defense. Control is exercised over all phases of army organization, mobilization, promotions, training, equipment, strategic questions; since February 1948, when PALFFY-OESTERREICHER became Inspector, the KPCs has been subordinated to the Inspectorate. PALFFY's adjutant is Capt. Istvan LAKATOS.

a. Chief of Staff of the Inspectorate of Defense (Honvedseg FelugyelojénekVezerkari fonoke)

The former head of this office, Staff Col. Zoltan PALFFY-MUHORAY, was relieved of his post in March 1948 for unreliability. Since the office is still being reorganized, its functions cannot yet be specified.

b. Disciplinary Section of the Inspectorate of Defense (Honvedseg Felugyelo-jének Fegyelmi Eloadoja)

Headed by Brig. Gen. Istvan SZILAGYI, this office investigates and judges smaller offenses of officers, acting in close collaboration with the KPCs.

c. Prosecutor of the Inspectorate of Defense (Honvedseg FelugyelojénekUgyesze)
